The stone and plaque were placed by the Farrell Family, descendants of the Andersons.

The Trees of Saltcoats

The 1880s and the Arrival of the Tree Planters

Visitors to the Town of Saltcoats often comment on the beautiful trees and plantations of trees that enhance the beauty of each season, provide habitat for an amazing number of nesting or foraging birds, offer summer cooling and shade and help to break the force of winter winds.

It is surprising to see in the earliest pictures of the community that there were few trees, neither on the town side of Anderson Lake nor on the Regional Park and farmland side. Some pictures dated from 1905 show the beginning of tree rows -some between lots and some rows of young trees delineating private properties from public roadways. Remnants of these 'rows' can still be seen around town. Trees of choice were Green ash, American elm, Manitoba maples, poplars. In winter these rows often hung heavy with glistening hoar frost - in fall the gold of the ash has been spectacular. Lovers' Lane (Crescent Lake Road from York Road running north and east) was a secluded, shady area with native fruit trees, shrubs and aspen poplar on both sides of the road.

The first settlers recounted accessing wood for building and wood for fuel at the Perley Bush and the Rothbury Bush. Prairie fires accounted for the absence of trees over vast tracts of land. The breaking of land and the control of the fires resulted in suitable conditions for the growth of aspen groves and native willow, alder, dogwood, pincherry and chokecherry.

Over the years, residents began planting hardy fruit trees and some imported spruce available as native trees not far north and east of Saltcoats. Caragana, lilac, and cotoneaster hedges were common. Some residents planted Scots pine, birch, varieties of willow, or experimented with trees better suited to less harsh winters. Today the warming climate, available water in dry years, hardier varieties, contribute to a greater variety of trees being grown including ornamental crabapples, oak, silver maple, basswood and linden, mountain ash, Ohio buckeye.

Spring has finally arrived. New sights will be on the streets with kids and adults walking and riding bikes. Here's just a few things to remember:

- You are sharing the road with pedestrians and cyclists, reduce your speed.
- There are lots of parked vehicles which may obscure pedestrians stepping out onto the road.
- Reduce your speed when near the schools or parks where there are likely to be children.

Cyclists and Pedestrians remember:

- Wear bright colors and use lights, especially when riding at night and in the morning.
- Wear a properly-fitted helmet. It is the best way to prevent head injuries and death.
- Make sure drivers see you before you cross. If the driver is stopped, make eye contact before you step into the road.

Did you know that the SDRP has an 18 target disc golf course located South East beyond the ball diamonds at the Saltcoats District Regional Park. At a meeting on May 13, the question arose if there is enough interest to upkeep the course. Are you or a group interested in coming out to the course to play? Let us know what you think? The SDRP is located by Anderson Lake. The park offers a beautiful beach, boat launch, concession, ball diamonds, campsites, pavilion and the Leflay Trail for a leisure and informative hike. If interested please email saltcoats.admin1@sasktel.net or call 306-744-2212.
